The 7,000-member United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union went on strike at noon today against the British Columbia fishing in-

Involved were close to 4,000 salmon net fishermen, seek-ing higher prices for their catch and other benefits; 500 tendermen — the men who pack the catch from ship to shore — and 3,000 shoreworkers in the plants, who want higher wages and fringe

It was the first full-scale strike since 1963.

Some workers remained on the job where necessary to clean up and process fish caught and deliveded before

In Victoria, between 40 and 50 fishermen were involved, although many of them have been fishing up to the Skeena River, and between 60 and 70 workers at the B.C. Packers plant at Ogden Point.

STOP PRODUCING

"Pretty near all the industry will stop producing," said Homer Stevens of Vancouver, UFAWU president.

He said the Prince Rupert co-operative plant may keep operating and workers will maintain refrigeration and safety equipment in plants.

There are three small non-union fish plants in Victoria - Oakland Industries, Dennis Shellfish and Coast Shellfish but the UFAWU has said it will picket them if they tempt to process fish after noon today.

Voting was completed late Thursday night by shore-workers on the last offer by the Fisheries Association of nies, and the UFAWU said it was rejected by 92 per cent.

The offer included raises of 60 cents an hour this year and 50 cents an hour next year Shoreworkers want 80 cents an hour this year and 80 cents an hour next year. Most of them earn less than $3.50 an

WAGES ISSUE

Stevens said wages are a workers feel the industry has been underpaying employees

Other issues include the flexible weekend, where plants have been able to sub-stitute Sunday-Monday for the Saturday-Sunday and overtime.

The union wants double time for all Sunday work and double time after the first two hours Monday to Friday.

The rejected offer included double time after three hours on weekdays but nothing on weekend work. Stevens said.

Fishermen and the companies have been as much as 191/2 cents a pound apart on new prices for salmon. In ad-"very strong feeling" among fishermen that the companies should pay for workmen's compensation coverage, half the cost of the Canada Pension Plan and half the cost of a medical-dental plan.

He said the companies had no offers on these points. Stevens said effects of the strike on fresh fish should be noticed by the public in a week at the most and in a few days in some places. Some stores have supplies of frozen fish on hand and generally there is a "fair" supply of canned salmon. Effects of the strike on these supplies should be noticeable 10 days to two weeks, he

In Victoria, Elgin (Scotty) Neish, secretary-treasurer of UFAWU Local 24, estimated most local shops carry supplies which will last to the middle or end of next week "before they start to feel the full effect of the strike."

Outside the strike are 750 members of the Pacific Trollers Association (PTA) who will be deciding Saturday whether to support the strike or carry on fishing. Trollers are owner-operated boats which fish with lines rather

SCOTT PROBES JAPAN'S BOOM

The paradox of a nation that will almost certainly be the richest on earth within a decade, yet suffers deeply from neuroses caused by its sensational growth, will be the subject of a series of special reports from Japan by Times' columnist Jack Scott.

In the first of six articles, appearing in Saturday's Times, Scott begins his examination of a country locked in a crisis of poor housing and widespread industrial pollution, yet experiencing new riches that penetrate

Scott has spent two weeks travelling throughout the crowded Japanese islands, investigating what he calls a national form of schizophrenia, a nation trying to come to terms with both the blight and the rewards of an industrial boom without parallel in the world.

In his series of reports he examines Canada's im-proving trade relations with the Japanese, brought about by their need to present a new image in their trading role, the part played by a trades union movement that stresses company loyalty, the uncertain existence of Tokyo, the capital city, and the future of a country in which affluence and anxiety go hand-in-hand.

$ Devaluation Rumors Flying

Times News Services

LONDON - The U.S. dollar already at an alltime low, plunged even farther today on money markets around the world in the face of rumors that the U.S. would devalue the dollar for the third time in 14 months this weekend.

The London Evening Stan-dard said a major develop-ment to deal with the monetary crisis could be imminent and may involve linking European Common Market currencies to gold instead of the dol-

It said the situation had reached crisis dimensions and that "market men were talk-ing of a crunch being immi-nent — possibly this weeknent end.

The value of the dollar plunged so low in Frankfurt that several major West German banks halted trading in dollars one hour ahead of schedule. A dollar was worth somewhere between 2.24 and 2.26 German marks at 4 p.m.

The value of the dollar dropped three per cent within 24 hours in Switzerland and the head of the Swiss national bank described the situation in foreign exchange as "com-pletely out of control."

There were rumors that the franc would be revalued — or possibly devalued against the dollar to prevent a flood of low-priced American goods

Karl Otto Pooehl, West Ger-nan state secretary for monetary affairs, said the U.S. currency had become "vastly undervalued" and further decline could lead to collapse of the world's monetary system

Poehl told an international eeting of business leaders in Frankfurt: "The devaluation of the dollar and the revaluation of the mark have gone too far" in a trend he de-scribed as "worrisome and dangerous."

The dollar, he said, has declined to a level that "nobody dared to imagine some months ago."

Poehl said he was con-vinced confidence in the dollar eventually would be restored — but it might take a year or two for the reduced value of U.S. money to cor-rect the U.S. trade deficit.

On the world market, the British pound was the only currency to weaken against

The Financial Times said the dollar crisis resulted from "the continuing ramification of the Watergate affair and the wide-spread feeling arising from it that President Nixon lacks the authority either to result to the lacks the authority omy or to take a positive initiative in the reform of the in ternational monetary and trading systems.

The dollar bought less than four French francs in Paris today for the first time in 16 years. It reached an all-time low against the Japanese yen and U.S. tourists in Hong Kong got less than five Hong Kong dollars for $1 today for the first time in history.

It also fell to new lows in Frankfurt and Zurich and there were reports that soon it might buy only two West German marks and it would buy four less than a year ago.

RECORD JUMP IN U.S. PRICES

WASHINGTON (AP) Pushed upward by a record increase in the cost of farm products, wholesale prices rose in the United States last month at the sharpest rate since January, 1951, the government said today.

The bureau of labor statistics said the wholesale price index advanced by 2.4 per cent in June, just below the 2.5 per cent record in Jan-uary, 1951, during the Korean War inflationary boom. With adjustment for seasonal price changes, the rise was almost as bad, 2.3 per cent.

The seasonally adjusted increase matched the March advance in wholesale prices, which also was the highest since January, 1951.

Meanwhile, the bureau reported that the U.S. unemployment rate dropped to 4.8 per cent in June, marking the first time since June, 1970, that the rate has been below

Prices of farm products increased seven per cent in June, the biggest one-month jump, since the government began keeping such records in

Stupich said Thursday the co-operative would likely need outside financial help in order to swing a Panco deal and added that the government would be "quite favorably inclined to give support to this particular deal."

The government, since it took office last September, has supported the idea of co-operatives going into business in agricultural production. Other sources have indicatbranch's interim requirement for at least five parts per mil-lion of dissolved oxygen at a key water monitoring station in Neroutsos Inlet was "reaonable" but said in his opinion three or four parts per million on average through the inlet would be adequate.

Earlier in the day he said a 30 per cent rollback in production at the Port Alice mill still left it meeting the water standards in the inlet only half the time and a further production cut appears likely.

About 70 of the mill's 500 employees were laid off when the work week was trimmed from seven to five days to try and meet water quality by re ducing mill effluent.

The witness called by Rayonier before Tollefson was Dr. Max Katz, a biologist and research director at Scattle Marine Laborator Marine Laboratories.

After telling the board he believes most pollution con-trols at pulp mills are a waste of time, energy and money, he was asked by Lindholm if he had advised Rayonier of that because the company had undertaken to spend about $32 million on such controls.

Katz replied he knew Rayonier wouldn't pay any attention to that view.

He said an argument could be made that mill waste was actually beneficial to the in-let's fish population. The effluent provided a tremendous volume of nutrients used in the marine food chain, for one thing. And where low oxygen content now supressed pre-dators, raising the water's oxygen content could mean more predators to feed on

Everything But Money

The community school concept this area is becoming established as an excellent idea that nobody wants to pay for. Both Saanich, in the case of the proposed school-and-communitycentre in the Burnside area, and City Council, in regard to the similar complex planned for Macdonald Park in James Bay, endorse the principle but keep a cautious hand on the purse strings.

The idea of the community school arose from a growing public belief that costly school buildings should not stand idle for many daylight hours a week, most evenings and all weekend. It was but a step from after-hours use of gymnasiums for sports, and art rooms and manual training facilities for adult education, to the next stage of building school facilities that would be more easily adaptable to extra-curricular uses. And the next phase was to propose facilities designed with the needs of neighborhood residents particularly in mind — swimming pools, meeting rooms, hobby shops and other leisure-time accommodation.

Since schools are usually centrally located, the proposals seemed feasible. The problem has been financing. For while school district budgets can embrace the educational aspects of the centres, it remains for the municipalities to provide funds for the portions of the buildings which will be devoted to adult use.

Municipal budgets are already

Or could they? The simple fact heavily loaded, and funds are dependent almost entirely on property taxes. Home-owners are already. squirming under a tax burden which mounts each year. When the burden becomes excessive, there is a trend away from home ownership, away from municipalities whose taxes are higher than elsewhere, and a general squeezing of expenditure on essential services throughout the community.

That is why, faced with an idea they approve, municipal councils are trying to pass the financing along to the provincial government, or tying in suggestions that here is one more reason why municipal revenue sources should be bolstered by a share in income tax. That is not going to result in any real relief for the taxpayer - it matters little which of his pockets has to produce the revenue funds - but it would make municipal financing easier.

The question is, how long would it make such financing easier? Since demands for municipal services, and the cost of such services, are constantly increasing, there is little prospect that any municipality will ever reach a position - no matter what tax resources it commands - when it can say: "Everything is fine, we've got all we need."

Most municipal governments are already involved in expensive recreation financing — swimming pools, skating and curling rinks, auditoriums and other facilities. To this extent, the community centre costs do not constitute a new type of expenditure - merely a program of building to be added to existing programs. Clearly, the cost of such facilities should not be tacked on to education budgets.

The situation calls for some cooperative meetings between provincial and local authorities to work out a program for the centres. And perhaps under the circumstances the very first point to be decided should be a distinction between desirability -/which almost everyone concedes - and necessity, which might call for some closer calculations.

Tolerance, Patience, Silence

DUBLIN - "At no point in the past five years" (since the latest North Ireland troubles erupted) "has public sympathy for the I.R.A. been at such a low ebb in the Republic nor has hostility toward it among the vast majority been so

'And our impressions are also that in Northern Ireland support for the I.R.A. and the violent camp is now at its lowest ebb also and the will for peace in both communities (Ulster's Protestants and Catholics) is stronger than at any time since killing began in 1969. This doesn't mean I.R.A. is defeated or unable to continue because any modern society is immensely vulnerable to urban guerrilla activities of even a small minority nowadays. But it is a very small minority

With these words Dr. Garret Fitzgerald, the voluble and exceedingly intelligent Foreign Minister of the new Dublin Government, expressed what I have found to be widespread hope in this Republic, that the situation in the North may now be calmed and an all-Ireland council formed to explore tentatively means of drawing the partitioned island

New Start

A change in atmosphere has accompanied the change in the South Irish Government, the retirement of President Eamon de Valera and his replacement by a Protestant, Erskine Childers, and London's fresh determination, supported by all British parties, to restart North Ireland's political life with guaranteed Catholic representation in its provincial Government. Moreover, there is appreciation of the difficulties facing Britain's troops, battered by snipers and bombers in the North. One is told: "Our greatest fear is they might withdraw too soon the way they did in Palestine. The British Army is the best force we could hope for in Ulster. U.N. blue berets would never be voted and couldn't do the job."

But there is fear that London, fed up with spending money and losing men, might get out of Ulster before the road

Kennedy Criticized

Influential people complain that most South Irishmen are as irked as North Irishmen with the views Kennedy has advertised on this emotional problem. They criticize him for "insensitivity to reality which isn't as he seems to think, polarized into Dublin versus London. He appears more interested in the Irish-American voters than the Irish."

The psychological mood here has altered for the better. It is felt that if only short-term explosions can be avoided, the long-term prospects of harmonious settlement have been enhanced by membership in the European Common Market of both parts of Ireland: There is already a levelling out of differences between them in living standards and adjusting economic gaps.

Moreover, it is hoped that the European Community can supervise regional development in poor border regions linking the two Irelands, a project that may ultimately be taken over by an all-Ireland council. But this is all for the day-after-tomorrow. Today and tomor-row the need is for tolerance among the Irish, both Protestant and Catholic, patience among the English, and silence among American politicians.

Quebec Looks West ern Canada these days and it is probably

The new attention is indicated by several straws in the wind: the approaching Western Economic Opportunities Confer ence, the request by Ontario and Quebec to send observers to it, and the wide play given the Manitoba election by major French-language dailies.

Historically, Quebec's French-language newspapers have maintained staff writers outside the province only in Ottawa, depending on wire services for dayto-day coverage of other Canadian events.

Occasionally they send reporters out on roving assignments. During the Manitoba election, Quebec City's Le Soleil and Montreal's Le Devoir and La Presse all had their own newsmen assigned to the event and all three papers commented at length on their editorial pages.

Special Interest

Why the interest in Manitoba? Claude Ryan, publisher of Le Devoir, said in an editorial: "Thursday's general election in Manitoba assumes a special interest because, of the three New Democrat governments which have come to power the west since 1969, that of Mr. Ed Schreyer was the first to return to the

"A strong movement of sympathy has been shown in the West towards the NDP. Thursday's election was the first chance to prove if it is a passing or lasting phenomenon.

Even if Mr. Schreyer has not won the decisive victory which observers predicted, the election results show that the West remains a most interesting political

"Perhaps from there, will emanate sooner or later the elements of a renewal in depth of the Canadian political alternative."

Mr. Ryan, with editorial writers in La Presse and Le Soleil, noted the efforts of the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives during the campaign.

"Mr. Schreyer would probably have carried off a more eloquent victory," Mr. Ryan wrote, "if it had not been for some last-minute errors and factors, one

"Mr. Schreyer pledged himself in 1969 to settle this question on which all Manitoba governments have come to grief. Four years later, having had to face serious disagreement within his own government, he must have admitted he was powerless to act.

"There is nothing astonishing in the fact that thousands of Roman Catholic

For Raymond Dube, an editorial writer in Le Soleil, the main thing to be learned from the election is that "socialism no longer appears to be the black beast which it was in the fairly recent

"Numerous Canadians, particularly those in the west of the country, are less and less hesitant to elect candidates with

"It is obvious that the West is the main home of socialism and that socialism is slowly penetrating the East. This is the complete reverse of earlier days when the trend was from east to west."

While socialism, he wrote, has already penetrated Ontario, "before it reaches the Atlantic shores it has a severe obstacle to clear: Quebec, where resistance to socialism is still supreme among the mass of people."

Cyrille Felteau, writing in La Presse, said that on general principles it is good that Mr. Schreyer and his government did not gain the vast majority predicted

"Too often, crushing majorities are dangerous gifts for parties. They tempt governments to allow themselves to slide down the slippery slope of satisfaction which leads to arrogance, always a bad

"We have had several examples of this in recent years in Ottawa, Quebec City and elsewhere."

Regard for Quebec

But Mr. Ryan said Premier Schreyer's importance in Canadian political life has been increased with his victory and this is good for Quebec.

'It will not be without interest to recall that Mr. Schreyer, in the last four. years, has shown himself to be one of the first ministers most open to the French fact and the particular aspirations of

"Without forgetting that as a goodprovincial leader he will have to first consider the interests of his own fellow citizens, we are happy to know that Mr. Schreyer will still be present when Canadian first ministers meet." And Mr. Felteau said that as a result of the election, "one thing is certain." "In coming years Manitoba politics will continue to retain the attention of many observers across the country ... The victory of Ed Schreyer permits one to augur the deployment of provincial and regional policies capable of better meeting the 'many challenges which equality and social progress pose for Canada in a climate of democratic liberty."

Drinking

Congratulations on your editorial of June 18 "Everything is Beautiful" concerning Premier Barrett's enthusiasm for European drinking habits, and in which you state (to quote) "Saying there are few drunks in Europe is like saying there are few salmon off Trial Island.'

Now that alcohol has been classified by the Le Dain Commission as a dangerous, addictive drug, should not the sale be controlled as in the case of heroin and similar brain-damaging drugs? The only losers would be the "pushers".

During the program "Cross-Country Check-Up" on CBC radio May 27, about overcrowding in Canadian prisons, I did not notice any reference to the alarming increase in use of alcohol as one of the prime factors causing the overcrowding. An increase in use of alcoholic beverages is inevitably followed by an increase in prison population.

Over the years liquor laws have been relaxed and more outlets allowed in response to agitators who claimed that would be a solution for over-indulgence, but now we are informed (Victoria Times, June 21 - "More Canadians Taking to Drink") that 80 per cent of Canadian adults now drink compared with 67 per cent twenty years ago. Propaganda is a powerful weapon in the hands of monied interests.

Why strive to conserve the land and water in this beautiful country unless we also attempt to protect the people from this destructive drug? Surely we want a trustworthy nation, not a degenerate one. -M. Maclennan, 1310 Topaz Ave.

London - The French army authorities who recently got possession of Germany's airship secrets when the Zeppelin dirigible landed in Luneville have succeeded in getting plans designed by the Krupps for a gun to be used against an aeroplane. While it is not admitted directly by the French minister of war, or by the police, it is clear from a story given out here that the French authorities know all the details of the newest aeroplane gun and will undoubtedly proceed to manufacture it themselves or improve on it. The fact became public yesterday when a man walked into the French foreign office carrying a satchel which contained plans for the gun. They had been spirited out of Germany under the eyes of vigilant border guards.

BOGOTA - Plaza Catia, at the edge of Caracas, has changed very little since President Nixon's visit in 1958. The Case for the Big Car by the propaganda successes being enjoyed by the bicycle and small car lobbies? The bicycle is a fairly pleasant machine for limited uses by a few people, but claims that it can substitute for the automobile as a device for moving people around town are grossly over-

It is painful for the large part of the population that is substantially over-weight. Most old people will not be very happy aboard it. Nor will mothers who must take along small children during a shopping trip to the supermarket.

It is an exhausting and brutal m chine in cities built on hills, and it is a most unattractive way to travel where ever and whenever the temperature is over 90 degrees or under 30. It is unpleasant in either rain or snow. I parked, even chained, out of eyesigh more than 10 minutes, it is a cinch to be stolen. And then, of course, there is the awkward question of courage.

There is something about the sight of a bicyclist asserting his narrow claim to the public right of way that infuriates many automobile drivers. Car drivers have a proprietary feeling for asphalt. Like those beach-house owners at snooty summer resorts who see purple when they see strangers using their sand and their ocean, these drivers, zealous to assert car-monopoly rights to asphalt, lose control of themselves when a bicycle appears ahead.

I suggest, as a general proposition, though arguable, that one of every 20 motorists enters a state of insanity simply by starting his car, and in this state one of the things he is likeliest to do is to teach a bicyclist a good lesson. Enough. It takes courage to go by bicy-

These objections will be met with the usual arguments: too bad about those fatties; they ought to allm down, and bicycling will help. Old people will stay young longer if they exercise more.

Mothers should not have so many babies that they have to do large shops at the supermarket; don't they know there's a population explosion on?

We need not dwell on these arguments beyond pointing out that they are both useful and tyramical in their assumptions that there is something disgraceful in being either fat, old or cal view of how the world ought to be

The bicycle, in short, may be a pleasant sporting instrument for the young, the athletic old and the eccenat least in a congenial climate and landscape, but in a country that isolates its residents 20 miles from their market places and their work, it can never constitute transportation except for the ro-

The case against the small car is more urgent, because under pressure created by the oil industry's campaign to publicize the so-called energy crisis, Detroit is being urged to abandon its traditional mastodonic gasoline garglers and put us in small cars.

This would be a long step backward. The small car is a car that excludes a conductive forms and car is a car that excludes the conductive forms are the proposed to the conductive forms and car is a car that excludes the conductive forms are the conductive forms are the conductive forms and car is a car that excludes the conductive forms are the conductive forms and car is a car that excludes the conductive forms are the conductive forms are the conductive forms and car is a car that excludes the conductive forms are t people. Few seat more than two people with any comfort; in fact, the rear seats of most seem designed to punish any who dare invade the solitude of the couple on the front seat.

What is the social implication of the small car? Well, it implies, at its most generous, a nuclear family at its most nuclear: mother and father on the front seat, their luggage on the rear. That leaves little space for kiddies, and as for arthritic old grandfather, he will only ask to go along once after you have crumpled him into the back seat and driven him 200 miles to vacation

Socially, the small car threatens further shrinkage of the family. This seems an illogical direction to take in the car at a time when there appears to be rising interest in communal groups and extended families.

Nor does the small car make sense as relief for an "energy crisis."

Being relatively easy to park and relatively easy on gasoline, it will, in fact, merely encourage continuance of present excessive use of automobiles. If the oil really is going to rum out, we ought to be encouraging other kinds of transportation, not more of the same wasteful old traffic-jammed

Sound policy would probably dictate that Detroit make nothing but mast-odons, big enough for the whole darned family. Mom and dad and the kids and the old folks and Uncle Tom Cobbly and all. Design should insure gasoline con-sumption of a gallon every eight miles town and 16 or 18 on the big turn-

As the occasional pleasure in holiday vehicles for the family the great big car makes good sense whereas the small car makes none at all. Neither size makes any sense for local transport, except for the occasional emergency trip to hospi-

With the big car's higher costs, we would have to limit its use to holiday and celebratory occasions, when it might bring us all together again in play and leisure. Being too expensive to run around town in, it would also help end the "energy crisis" by forcing us at last to do something about moving ourselves to shops and business on something more sensible than private

Old crop soybeans and soy-bean meal, which are traded for liquidating purposes only, were down the limit.

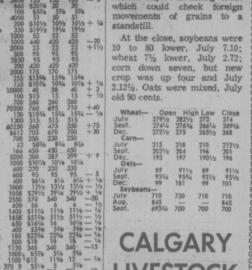

New crop soybeans and meal were weak, while soybean oil prices were irregular with new crop options gaining 30 points.

Stock

Some early selling in wheat, corn and oats was a carryover from the previous seserally-bearish overtone to the trade because of the govern-ment's export licensing order which could check foreign movements of grains to a standstill.

At the close, soybeans were 10 to 80 lower, July 7.10; wheat 7½ lower, July 2.72; corn down seven, but new crop was up four and July 2.12½. Oats were mixed, July old 90 cents.

Canada Water Tally Urged Before Exporting to U.S.

Canada meds a national inventory of its water resources before it decides such important questions as whether we can afford to divert surpluses into the United States, says W. Allan Ker of Victoria, new president of the Canadian Water Resources Association.

Ker said the association has been esked to submit a brief on the question to the July 24 meeting of Prime Minister Trudeau and the four western premiers in Calgary.

He said it was premature to say what direction the brief would take but the association neither favors nor opposes ex-port of water but insists that Canada's needs must come

A national inventory would also supply background infor-mation for hydro electric dev-elopment and agriculture.

Ker was elected president of the association at the annual meeting in Winnipeg. The Canadian Water Resources Association is an organization of engineers, agriculturalists, university profes-sors, municipal and provincial

The National Basketball Association club has had the highest renewal rate of season ticket holders in history + 92 per cent despite a 26-56 win-loss record last season. The reason, of course, is the drawing power of new coach-general manager Bill Russell, the former Boston star and now a respected TV analyst. Incidentally the Sonics will be hosting the next NBA all-star game at the Coliseum on Land 15.

Meanwhile, the argument continues: is fishing all skill or just luck? At Sekiu, in Washington State, three Oklahomans, who never before had fished for salmon, rented a boat, were

Best story on the Wimbledon mix-up, the professional players association boycotting Wimbledon, came from Sun columnist Jim Kearney last week:

"What a sorry, misguided joke these characters are. And what short memories. Only five years ago they were bleating for the right to crack the white flannel, country club curtain and play in all the respectable, big-name tournaments.

"They won the right because Wimbledon defied the amateur tennis establishments and cracked the curtain for them. The world's most prestigious tournament was the first to in.

The world's most prestigious tournament was the first to invite the professionals in. That was only five years ago. Once Wimbledon made the move, everyoric else followed. The pros now play all the big tournaments that used to be the exclusive preserve of the shamateurs. And they play them for big prize money too.

"One might think they owe a small debt of gratitude to the All-England club. But that would be asking too much. The hallmark of the professional athlete these days is to hell with everyone. Except number one."

"These guys aren't pros. They're bush."

LEEDS, England (Reuter) England fast bowlers Chris Old and Geoff Arnold rocked New Zealand on the opening day of the third and final cricket test Thursday, and at the close the touring team were 262 for nine wickets.

New Zealand, who made 440 and 551 for nine declared in their last two test innings against England, appeared they won the toss and had first use of a perfect batting wicket at the Headingley

But Old and Arnold shot out the first seven batsmen for 215, after sharing the first three wickets in the space of four balls with the total at Old finished with four wickets for 71, while Arnold's three wickets cost 57 runs.

New Zealand owed much to a spirited fifth-wicket stand of Mark Burgess and Vic Pollard, who had both scored centuries in the drawn second test. Thursday Burgess scored 87. Pollard made 62.

Salmon Fishing Pace Slowed Down by Wind

Fishing pressure declined with the windy weather earlier this week but salmon are still coming in from a number of Vancouver Island spots.

Pedder Bay shows the most promise around the southern and of the Island.

Andreas Jedinak landed a 45-pound chinook elong fits, help bed on Tuesday and "quite a few" have been caught in the 30-pound range. In addition, coho up to seven pounds are allowing up in the same vicinity.

Some of the coho have been grabbing flashtails on the surface while the larger chinooks are going after minnows and super-minnows.

Becher Eay has slowed down a little with about one-third of the boats going out managing to come back with fish. Chinools up to 28 pounds form the main catch but some distermen have managed to land a few sockeye.

Sooke waters have also tapered off.
Sooke waters have also tapered off.
Oak Bay reports spotty returns with chinooks coming in from Discovery and Trial stands and cobo nearing he eight pound mark are being caught near the latter location.
Fishermen working the middle of Satellite Channel with about 150 feet of wire line and super-strip have come home with an essorted haul of chinooks and coho.
Chinooks and a few coho are showing up in waters between McCurdy Point and Mill Bay and a few chinooks have also been taken in Indian Bay. Use small spoons to simulate the minnows on which the salmon are feeding.
Chesterfield Rock, Misery Bay and The Narrows are yielding fair catches of both chinooks and coho.

Coho are snatching pink and white or green and white bucktails right on the surface near the Bell Buoy off Courtenay and the tides appear to be getting back in shape for good fishing for springs on Comox Bar this weekend — but that's not a promise.

Springs are scattered but coho catches are best off Cape

Mudge near Campbell River.

Freshwater fishermen continue to enjoy bountiful returns in most Island lakes due to the continued cool weather.

Around Victoria, Prospect Lake is yielding both trout and bass while Elk is producing good catches of bass and Durrance is noted for trout.

The mouth of the Cowichan River has been mentioned as a likely spot to fill a limit on sea-run cutthroats while trollers working Cowledan Lake for trout with a small Tom Mack spoon are striking it lucky.

The stretch of Nanaimo River between First and Second lakes is still providing excellent catches for fly fishermen and

We once thought the forest was forever. Now we're sure it is.

Ah, the good old days. There was a time when B.C.'s forests were seen as a wast, endless supply of timber. You could log for years and nover seem to make a der 'Li that great green blanks. Jo, our grandfathers cut and hauled and moved on to the next stand, with little or no thought for the future. Everyone worked toward bringing a provincial economy to its feet, while few realized the dangers of bringing the forest to its knees.

ing the forest to its knees. Those "good old days" are long since gone. Today, the indiscriminate practices of yesterday are no longer tolerated. The forest is still seen as a vast resource - but one that must be managed and renewed. Today, the forest industry of B.C. looks ahead to tomorrow - in more ways waste not, want not.

The ever-developing techniques of forest management involve every aspect of the forest environment. We've learned a lot in the last few years — and we're still learning. Experience has taught us how our actions, and the ac-tions of others, can affect the ecological balance of the forest. We're learning how to think ahead. — to predict effects and side effects. Because our prime concern is the proper management of B.C.'s forests we've learned how to work at renewing this precious resource to ensure

We've also discovered how to make the most of the forest's bounty. No longer are small logs left to decay at logging sites. Every economically usable piece of wood is recovered to be processed in the manufacture of lumber, pulp, plywood, shingles and dozens of other forest products. Just as we've learned to make the most of forest management techniques, we've also learned to utilize everything the forest pro-vides — including information

Through the combined efforts of the forest service and the forest industry, 415 million new trees have been planted throughout B.C., as of 1972. Yet, about 7% of the total forest land in B.C. is classed as not satisfactorily restocked. as not satisfactorily restocked (N.S.R.). These under-stocked patches of land represent a legacy from the past — the leftovers from ancient forest fires and outmoded logging practices. For various reasons, Nature's reforestation efforts in these areas have failed to produce acceptable results. And even though much of this land pre-dates logging or even the settling of this province, we are de-termined that it must eventually give birth to a new are accelerating our reforestation efforts. In fact, by 1980, we expect to be able to plant 150 million seedlings on 400,000 acres a year — every year. Through a sensible, systematic reforestation program, our N.S.R. acreage will be reduced to a realistic balance point that can be maintained indefinitely.

Because of reforestation. there are more trees growing in British Columbia today than there were 200 years ago. The forest industry of B.C. intends to keep it that way — a perpetual forest to be enjoyed by you and your children — a constantly re-generating forest that con-tinues to provide the strong foundation of our provincial economy.

If you're looking for something permanent, look at the forest. Because we've made it our business to make sure it will always be there. For

"He said he would personally understand our resort to such measures if the mesages transmitted through the Canadian channel failed to produce any alleviation of North Vietnamese aggression, and that Canada would transmit messages around this

SPRAY HAZARD INVESTIGATED

OTTAWA (CP) - The federal health protection branch is investigating all medicated sprays sold in Canada for possi-ble health hazards, Health Minister Marc Lalonde told the

This follows Monday's announcement by the United States government removing Pertussin medicated vaporizer spray from the market after the death of a five-year-old girl whose room was sprayed with the product.

"The Pertussin drug has been voluntarily withdrawn from the Canadian market since 1969," the minister said. "There are similar products available in Canada but they do not have the same formulation as the Pertussin product. Therefore there would seem to be no cause for alarm at the present time."

Bugging 'Mistake'

OTTAWA (CP) - The government wiretapping bill is a "bad bill and would be a mis-take for the people of Canada," former United States attorney-general Ramsay Clark

Clark, who was attorneygeneral in the Johnson adinistration in the mid-1960s, said wiretapping should be banned in all cases.

He told the Commons juscommittee that wiretapping is immoral and ineffec-tive. Convictions of major

2nd Time Lucky

LONDON (UPI) - British soldier Ken Taylor's first attempt to find a bride by mail turned sour. But he had better luck the second time around.

His initial pen-pal courtship ended when the girl flew to Cyprus, where he was stationed, to marry him. She fell in love with his best friend.

The story of that romance filtered back to England, where Pat Saunders, 32, read about it and wrote to him. Taylor wrote back and love flourished anew.

They met for the first time at London airport and married four days later.

KIOSK TYPE ADS URGED FOR CITY

Kloak type advertising as perated in many European littles has been proposed for lowntown Victoria.

City aldermen expressed ome support for the idea earler this week when it was putned to Victoria's zoning compilities.

Wilf Fraser, regional manager of Neon Rroducts Ltd., suggested that the klosks be allowed at a dozen key locations in the downtown area. He said of the three races available on each klosk two would be used for advertising purposes while the third could be used by the city as a directional board for points of interest or general community notices.

Frazer said the Illuminated seven-foot kiosks could also be modified with the addition of benches or telephone neet reminded aldermen that klosks had been tried in both Centennies and Bastion Squares years ago but abandoued because 'within about three weeks they were covered in rude words."

In a brief to the continities, he also asked for amendments to the city's sign bylaw which will phase out all wortop and "third party" billboards by Aug. 1875.

Fraser said the Neon Products proposal is to have a limited number — possibly 15 — of three-faced revolving signs in the heavy commercial and industrial area of the city. He said this would be a great benefit to many business firms and tourist enterposals and it would be a great benefit to many business firms and tourist enterposals. nes firms and tourist enter-prises and it would "save our business also."

Originally, the youth workers were to staff the hospital's emergency department and assist in the care of young people, to follow up their original cases and to es-tablish liaisons with all youth-serving agencies, the police and the addiction research

"Many problems were en-countered in the initial stages of the project," the report-said. "The hospital staff had difficulty understanding the role of these new workers."

The goals of the original project have changed and expanded. As the incidence of drug crises decreased, the youth workers were able to turn their attention to youth in general. MINISTER FIRST IN DIET LINEUP

EDMONTON (CP) - Health Minister Neil Crawford of ficially opened the weight reduction clinic at the Misericordia Hospital this week, receiving diet instruction and having lunch at the hospital cafeteria's diet line.

Crawford was the first patient to take part in the 12-week rogram, which is offered free of charge to any overweight person referred by a physician.

Dieticians at the hospital will use the group therapy method in an attempt to change eating habits so weight can be lost. Emphasis will be on nutrition and past eating

Participants will receive individual counselling and a recommendation for a meal pattern that the hospital food services department promises will result in a weight loss, but will still be enjoyable.

Mothers' Union Ends Membership Impasse

Phoney Troops Convertible Cost Million

Cambodian army command-ers drew an estimated $750,000 to $1.1 million during January, 1973, to pay non-existent troops, the General Accounting Office reported

It was the first estimate by a U.S. government agency of the extent of military payroll padding in the Cambodian war with funds that are supplied largely under American aid programs.

Corrupt payroll practices in the Cambodian military have been acknowledged previously by U.S. and Cambodian authorities but the extent of the abuses have never before been disclosed in dollar

Even today, the report in-dicated, "neither the United States government nor the GKR (Cambodian government) knows the extent of the phantom-troop problem and, despite repeated U.S. urgings and GKR corrective efforts, the problem still remains."

Sen. Mark Harrington, who requested the GAO study, said "this report reveals what we have long known about our in-volvement in Cambodia: the United States is bombing a foreign nation to support a corrupt government and corrupt practices.

"The bombing itself is abhorrent, but it is made even worse by the expenditure of millions of dollars to pad the pockets of corrupt Cambodian

The second, a lens, was not. But the resourceful Harry arranged to "borrow" a pair of his grandmother's spectacles for an hour or two. He came to Canada in 1910 and, after an early sally into the real estate field, opened his own photographic studio at Fort Street in 1918.

For the next 47 years his lens captured every detail of the Victoria scene: landscapes, seascapes, street cameos, stately homes, residents at With a hole cut in one end of the matchbox and his makeshift lens installed, Knight then obtained a piece of sensitized glass which he placed in the back of the box, and work and at play.

Fragrant Wallflowers Relatives of Cabbages

Wallflowers gain their chief popularity from their strong fragrance. So powerful are the best kinds that a little of their perfume on the spring breeze will recall at once the occasion you last saw them, even though you may have forgotten the sight of the plants and it has been 20 years since you saw

Victoria, and the lower end of Vancouver Island, is one of the handful of places in Canada where these simple but delightful plants can be grown to perfection, and the home gardener is the one who can do it. These are the so-called Enwallflowers, Cheiranthus cheiri native to southern

The reason we see so few good wallflowers in private gardens is that they are biennials; that is, the seeds are sown in May, the plants live outdoors all winter reaching their climax of color and fragrance by midspring of the following year. Most people think of buying young plants in spring, but will not purchase them in early September when they should be put into flowering places. *

Though some of the plants live over to another year, never again will they reach the perfection of the first spring. They should be discarded as soon as flowering ceases.

Gardeners who sowed wallflower seeds at the recommended time in May will now have seedlings about three inches high with eight or ten leaves. If not yet transplanted, get them at once into an open, sunny piece of ground well enriched with compost soil.

These are close relatives of cabbages, needing to make fairly rapid growth to prevent woodiness of stems. Move each seedling with a trowelful of soil, water each as it is planted and firm well. A setback from drought causes premature budding this fall.

Give the plants a spacing of 10 inches at least. As soon as established, pinch out the top growing point. Don't leave it until later, or you'll delay new growths which must be produced in time to harden before winter. By September you should have bushy plants just about 10 inches across and six or seven high. These are the ones to give a long season of

At the first opportunity of having a place ready for them, move the wallflowers, now each having a shovelful of soil attached to its roots.

Put some near a frequently used path, but put a good lot just out of sight around a shrubby corner so you get perfume before you see the plants.

Don't give any more fertilizer, nor any fresh manure after this early July moving period. Late forcing is to be avoided if the plants are to have the chance of surviving a cold winter spell in good condition.

Siberial wallflower, Cheiranthus allionii, is a perennial here. I recail seeing it in a rocky hilltop Saanich garden 20 years ago. It too has some fragrance.

Any wallflower with fragrance is worth growing.

Strait Flight Spirit Dampened by Cost

After two failures, the Victoria Radio Control Model Club is going to do a little thinking before attempting a third model airplane flight across Juan de Fuca Strait. "We're still interested," club member Cliff Stacey said

Thursday, but club members have already spent $200 on the but club members have already spent $200 on the two un-Successful flights.

The second Spirit of Victoria aircraft spiralled into the sea off Clover Point Tuesday, only a mile from where the first Spirit crashed May 19. It had set off from Port Angeles shortly after 5 p.m., guided by radio transmitter by Stacey and Chris Cox in a boat crossing the strait.

Stacey said he thinks water got into the transmitter in the boat and knocked it out. This probably caused the first crash also, he said.

The first plane was demolished by the crash, but the second one is repairable, he said. It is possible there is natural radio interference at the point where both model planes came down, which knocks out the transmitters, said Stacey. The club may investigate this before attempting another flight, he said.

Deadlock

WINNIPEG (CP) - Liberal leader Izzy Asper and NDP candidate Murdoch MacKay were deadlocked with 3,137 votes each after a count Thursday of hospital votes cast in the Winnipeg riding of Wolseley in the June 28 Mani-toba general election.

"Have you ever been put through a meat grinder?" said Asper, who had a onevote lead over MacKay until bizarre sense of humor."

Jim Maloway, district re-turning officer for Wolseley, said only 26 of the 41 hospital ballots could be considered. Of those, Asper got 10, Mac-Kay 11 and Progressive Con-servative candidate Robert Steen three. Two ballots were rejected. Steen finished with

The 20-year-old Maloway said he wanted to check the rule book before deciding whether to cast the ballot that would determine the winner. He said a judicial recount is inevitable in any event.

By ROGER STONEBANKS Times Staff

The 7,000-member United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union went on strike at noon today against the British Columbia fishing industry.

Involved were close to 4,000 salmon net fishermen, seek-ing higher prices for their catch and other benefits; 500 tendermen — the men who pack the catch from ship to shore — and 3,000 shore-workers in the plants, who want higher wages and fringe

It was the first full-scale strike since 1963.

Some workers remained on the job where necessary to clean up and process fish caught and deliveded before

In Victoria, between 40 and 50 fishermen were involved, although many of them have been fishing up to the Skeena River, and between 60 and 70 workers at the B.C. Packers plant at Ogden Point.

STOP PRODUCING

"Pretty near all the in-dustry will stop producing," said Homer Stevens of Van-couver, UFAWU president.

He said the Prince Rupert co-operative plant may keep operating and workers will maintain refrigeration and safety equipment in plants.

There are three small nonunion fish plants in Victoria
— Oakland Industries, Dennis Shellfish and Coast Shellfish — but the UFAWU has said it will picket them if they at-tempt to process fish after noon today

Voting was completed late Thursday night by shore-workers on the last offer by the Fisheries Association of B.C., representing the compa-nies, and the UFAWU said it was rejected by 92 per cent.

The offer included raises of 60 cents an hour this year and 50 cents an hour next year. Shoreworkers want 80 cents an hour this year and 80 cents an hour next year. Most of them earn less than $3.50 an

WAGES ISSUE

Stevens said wages are a major issue because shore-workers feel the industry has been underlaying employees

Other issues include the flexible weekend, where plants have been able to substitute Sunday-Monday for the Saturday-Sunday

The union wants double time for all Sunday work and double time after the first two hours Monday to Friday. The rejected offer included double time after three hours on weekdays but nothing on weekend work, Stevens said.

Fishermen and the companies have been as much 19½ cents a pound apart on new prices for salmon. In adlition, said Stevens, there is 'very strong feeling' among men that the companies should pay for workmen compensation coverage, half the cost of the Canada Pen-sion Plan and half the cost of

The paradox of a nation that will almost certainly be the richest on earth within a decade, yet suffers deeply from neuroses caused by its sensational growth, will be the subject of a series of special reports from Japan by

In the first of six articles, appearing in Saturday's Times, Scott begins his examination of a country locked in a crises of poor housing and widespread industrial pollution, yet experiencing new riches that penetrate through every class.

Scott has spent two weeks travelling throughout the crowded Japanese Islands, investigating what he calls a national form of schlzophrenia, a nation trying to come to terms with both the blight and the rewards of an industrial boom without parallel in the world.

In his series of reports he examines Canada's improving trade relations with the Japanese, brought about by their need to present a new image in their trading role, the part played by a trades union movement that stresses company loyalty, the uncertain existence of Tokyo, the capital city, and the future of a country in which affluence and abxiety go hand-in-hand.

Devaluation Rumors Flying

Times News Services

LONDON - The U.S. dollar already at an alltime low, plunged even farther today on money markets around the world in the face of rumors that the U.S. would devalue the dollar for the third time in 14 months this weekend.

The London Evening Standard said a major development to deal with the monetary crisis could be imminent and may involve linking European Common Market currenties to gold stead of the college. cies to gold stead of the dol-

It said the situation had reached crisis dimensions and that "market men were talking of a crunch being imminent — possibly this weekend."

The value of the dollar plunged so low in Frankfurt that several major West German banks halted trading in dollars one hour ahead of schedule. A dollar was worth somewhere between 2.24 and 2.26 German marks at 4 p.m.

The value of the dollar dropped three per cent within 24 hours in Switzerland and the head of the Swiss national bank described the situation in foreign exchange as "com-pletely out of control."

There were rumors that the franc would be revalued - or possibly devalued against th dollar to prevent a flood of low-priced American goods.

Karl Otto Pooehl, West German state secretary for mone-tary affairs, said the U.S. currency had become "vastly un-dervalued" and further de-cline-could lead to collapse of the world's monetary system,

Poehl told an international meeting of business leaders in Frankfurt: "The devaluation of the dollar and the revaluation of the mark have gone too far" in a trend he de-scribed as "worrisome and dangerous." The dollar, he said, has declined to a level that "nobody dared to imagine some months ago."

Poehl said he was con vinced confidence in the dol-lar eventually would be res-tored — but it might take a year or two for the reduced value of U.S. money to correct the U.S. trade deficit.

On the world market, the British pound was the only currency to weaken against the dollar.

Dealers said the volume of trade was extremely thin with almost no one willing to buy dollars. This forced the dealers to mark the value of the U.S. money lower and lower in the hope of tempting

RECORD JUMP IN U.S. PRICES

WASHINGTON (AP) -Pushed upward by a record increase in the cost of farm products, wholesale prices rose in the United States last month at the sharpest rate since January, 1951, the government said today.

The bureau of labor statistics said the wholesale price index advanced by 2.4 per cent in June, just below the 2.5 per cent record in Jan-uary, 1951, during the Korean War inflationary boom. With adjustment for seasonal price changes, the rise was almost as bad, 2.3 per cent.

The seasonally adjusted increase matched the March advance in wholesale prices,

Seattle Power Cuts Looming

SEATTLE (AP) - Seattle City Light may ration power this winter because of low reservoir levels and delays in planned power plants in the Pacific Northwest.

Asst. Supt. Julian Whaley says the move would hit residences hardest.

City Light serves about 250,000 customers in the Greater Seattle area. 'Power simply would be cut off to various sections of the city on a rotating basis, for maybe two or more hours a

Whaley said industry and business would have to serve energy too, but that critical needs, such as hospitals, certain industrial and utility facilities and others would be supplied with power.

U.S. Never Listens In Latin America Until It's Too Late

BOGOTA - Plaza Catia, at the edge of Caracas, has changed very little since President Nixon's visit in 1958. Traffic is still ferced to flow round the dingy square where he was stoned by angry engineering, the Venezuelans have yet to unplug the Catla bottleneck between the airport freeway and the entrance to the city. During Sunday af-ternoon traffic jams, motor-ists inching round the plaza gaze dully at the same run-down theatre and bars that provided the backdrop for Nixon's first confrontation ble Latin Americans.

Washington simply yawned at the bad publicity. The ad-ministration knows that the council cannot force the Unit-ed States to relinquish sover-eignty over the canal.

The Security Council meeting did nothing to alter the stalemate; if anything, it may have encouraged the United States to take a harder line in future negotiations. Nevertheless, the Panamanians could take some comfort in the spotlight turned temporarily on their problem. As Panamanian strong man Gen.

CIA in Plot

The fact that Panama had to take its problems to the Security Council is an "indication of the crisis in the OAS," said Colombia's Foreign Minister Alfredo Vasquez Carrizosa. "There is a crisis of formalities, bureaucracy, red tape and annoying procedures that prevent a country from directly presenting any issue without having to go through commissions and subcomm sions," As if to emphasize Vasquez's point, the foreign ministers promptly referred a Peruvian proposal to reform the OAS to yet another study

If it all seems unreal, that come a charade. Latin Americans can hardly take Washington's promise of a "mature association" seriously when CIA agents are linked with an ITT plot to overthrow the President of Chile. "Tosuggest a 'mature association' when there isn't even a dialogue is neither realistic nor constructive," says Sol Linowitz, former U.S. ambassador

There never has been a dialogue, of course. Long before the OAS was conceived in 1948, the United States did most of the talking, while the Latin Americans listened attentively like so many well-

Paste-Up Job

The White House tried to paper over its errors by lob-bying for an OAS peacekeeping force in the Dominican Republic, only to be rebuffed by all but the Brazilians. A policy of benign neglect seems infinitely preferable to the political convulsions of a Bay of Pigs or Santo Domin-"Even Kennedy was unable to manage the situa-tion" says a Colombian dip-lomat. "The Alliance for Progress actually encouraged anti-American insurrections

The White House's benign neglect does not, of course, extend to the international ending agencies. Hence, Peru and Chile have been blackballed at the Agency for International Development, the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB), the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund because of their refusal to pay compensation for expropriated U.S. properties.

Lean on Banks

Other South American nawarmth of their reception at foreign banks depends on the state of their relations with the United States, Ecuador's credit rating, for example, is closely related to the number of California tuna boats it seizes each year.

Not that the Nixon Administration has ever pretended otherwise. Secretary of State William Rogers insists that "this is a businessmen's government dedicated to protect ng business' interests," and Nixon himself has countries that "discourage private investment" perils they invite at the international lending agencies.

A business approach hemisphere affairs may seem more realistic than the munifunpractical aid grams or a contingent of U.S.

If the Latin Americans have become reconciled to the hard facts of life in Washington, that does not mean that they fear or respect the United did in the past. The political pluralism that has weakened the OAS has helped also to cans' own sense of unity. Indeed, the very absence of any dialogue with the United States has forced the Latin Americans to seek one another out for the first time since the wars of indepen-

Out of this new togetherness is emerging a Latin American alternative to Nixon's corporate vision, one in which producing countries band together to play off the industrialized countries, instead of vice versa. The oil-exporting nations already have proved how profitable unity can be. Now, the coffee-producing as a result of the United with the International Coffee Agreement. The copper-exporting countries are groping toward a similar unity, as are the nations producing ban-anas, fish and meat.

As the United States devours more and more of the find that there is a price to pay for benign neglect, a price that the Latin Americans will exact with a vengeance. It may be, too, that the Latin Americans will work out their own methods for policing the multinational corporations instead of the other way around.

Poor Model

Perhaps the greatest mistake the United States has made in respect to Latin Nixon's predecessors has been to assume that the Latin Americans want the same things desired by Americans, and that, therefore, they can be obliged to pay a premium for them.

The Case for the Big Car

Is it all right to be a little dismayed by the propaganda successes being en-joyed by the bicycle and small car lob-bies? The bicycle is a fairly pleasant. machine for limited uses by a few peo-ple, but claims that it can substitute for automobile as a device for moving people around town are grossly over-stated.

It is painful for the large part of the pepulation that is substantially over-weight. Most old people will not be very happy aboard it. Nor will mothers who must take along small children during a shopping trip to the supermarket.

It is an exhausting and brutal ma-chine in cities built on hills, and it is a most unattractive way to travel wher-ever and whenever the temperature is over 90 degrees or under 30. It is un-pleasant, in either rain or snow. If parked, even chained, out of eyesight more than 10 minutes, it is a cinch to be stolen. And then, of course, there is the awkward question of courage.

There is something about the sight of a bicyclist asserting his narrow claim to the public right of way that infuriates many automobile drivers. Car drivers have a proprietary feeling for asphalt. Like those beach-house owners at snooty summer resorts who see purple when they see strangers using their sand and their ocean, these drivers, zealous to assert car-monopoly rights to asphalt, lose control of themselves when a bicycle appears ahead.

I suggest, as a general proposition, though arguable, that one of every 20 motorists enters a state of insanity simply by starting his car, and in this state one of the things he is likeliest to do is to teach a bicyclist a good lesson. Enough. It takes courage to go by bicy-

These objections will be met with the usual arguments: too bad about those fattles; they ought to slim down, and-bicycling will help. Old people will stay young longer if they exercise more.

Mothers should not have so many babies that they have to do large shops at the supermarket; don't they know there's a population explosion on?

We need not dwell on these arguments beyond pointing out that they are both useful and tyramical in their assumptions that there is something disgraceful in being either fat, old or out of step with the prevailing sociological view of how the world ought to be

The bicycle, in short, may be a pleasant sporting instrument for the young, the athletic old and the eccentric, at least in a congenial climate and its residents 20 miles from their market places and their work, it can never constitute transportation except for the ro-

The case against the small car is more urgent, because under pressure created by the oil industry's campaign to publicize the so-called energy crisis, Detfoit is being urged to abandon its traditional mastodonic gasoline gargiers and put us in small cars.

This would be a long step backward.

The small car is a car that excludes people. Few seat more than two people with any comfort; in fact, the rear seats of most seem designed to punish any who dare invade the solitude of the

What is the social implication of the small car? Well, it implies, at its most generous, a nuclear family at its most seat, their luggage on the rear. That

leaves little space for kiddies, and as for arthritic old grandfather, he will only ask to go along once after you have crumpled him into the back seat and driven him 200 miles to vacation

Socially, the small car threatens fur-ther shrinkage of the family.—This seems an illogical direction to take in the car at a time when there appears to be rising interest in communal groups and extended families.

Nor does the small car make sense as relief for an "energy crisis."

Being relatively easy to park and relatively easy on gasoline, it will, in fact, merely encourage continuance of the present excessive use of automobiles. If the oil really is going to run out, we ought to be encouraging other kinds of transportation, not more of the same wasteful old traffic-jammed

Sound policy would probably dictate that Detroit make nothing but mastodons, big enough for the whole darned family. Mom and dad and the kids and the old folks and Uncle Tom Cobbly and all. Design should insure gasoline consumption of a gallon every eight miles in town and 16 or 18 on the big turn-

As the occasional pleasure in holiday vehicles for the family the great big car makes good sense whereas the small car makes none at all. Neither size makes any sense for local transport, except for the occasional emergency trip to hospi-

With the big car's higher costs, we would have to limit its use to holiday and celebratory occasions, when it might bring us all together again in play and leisure. Being too expensive to run around town in, it would also help end the "energy crisis" by forcing us at last to do something about moving our-selves to shops and business on some-thing more sensible than private log cabins.

"'A m o n g their fellow settlers were traders and rail-construction men, gamblers and bootleggers, bush pilots and gold-mad prospectors."

The Patersons tell you of these people. They write of mayhem, tragedy, humor and plain old-fashioned courage.

They tell how to lonely

They tell how to lonely men," a young, blonde, beautiful female locating in that wo-manless area meant only one thing." And how hard it was to make them believe Ruth was "only living in a tent not making a living in it."

They describe early air travel in that far north land and the pilots who took so many chances. They tell of the fire that eventually wiped out most of Cranberry Portage and of its rebirth. And they write of how, at one time, the place nearly separated them. Then brought rated them. Then brought them back together again in an even closer relationship.

Strait Flight Spirit Dampened by Cost

After two failures, the Victoria Radio Control Model Club is going to do a little thinking before attempting a third model airplane flight across Juan de Fuca Strait.

'We're still interested," club member Cliff Stacey said Thursday, but club members have already spent $200 on the but club members have already spent $200 on the two unsuccessful flights.

successful flights.

The second Spirit of Victoria aircraft spiralled into the sea off Clover Point Tuesday, only a mile from where the first Spirit crashed May 19.

It had set off from Port Angeles shortly after 5 p.m., guided by radio transmitter by Stacey and Chris Cox in a boat crossing the strait.

crash also, he said. The first plane was demolished by the crash, but the second one is repairable, he said.

It is possible there is natural radio interference at the point where both model planes came down, which knocks out the transmitters, said Stacey. The club may investigate this before attempting another flight, he said.

The 7,000-member United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union went on strike at noon today against the British Columbia fishing in-

Involved were close to 4,000 salmon net fishermen, seeking higher prices for their catch and other benefits; 500 tendermen - the men who pack the catch from ship to shore — and 3,000 shoreworkers in the plants, want higher wages and fringe

It was the first full-scale

Some workers remained on the job where necessary to clean up and process fish caught and deliveded before the deadline.

In Victoria, between 40 and 50 fishermen were involved, although many of them have been fishing up to the Skeena River, and between 60 and 70 orkers at the B.C. Packers plant at Ogden Point.

STOP PRODUCING 'Pretty near all the industry will stop producing," said Homer Stevens of Vancouver, UFAWU president.

He said the Prince Rupert co-operative plant may keep operating and workers will maintain refrigeration and safety equipment in plants.

There are three small non-union fish plants in Victoria — Oakland Industries, Dennis but the UFAWU has said it will picket them if they atto process fish after noon today.

Voting was completed late Thursday night by shore-workers on the last offer by the Fisheries Association of B.C., representing the compa-nies, and the UFAWU said it was rejected by 92 per cent.

The offer included raises of 60 cents an hour this year and 50 cents an hour next year. Shoreworkers want 80 cents an hour this year and 80 cents an hour next year. Most of them earn less than $3.50 an

WAGES ISSUE

Stevens said wages are a major issue because shore-workers feel the industry has been underpaying employees

Other issues include the flexible weekend, where plants have been able to substitute Sunday-Monday for the Saturday-Sunday weekend,

The union wants double time for all Sunday work and double time after the first two hours Monday to Friday.

The rejected offer included on weekdays but nothing on weekend work, Stevens said.

Fishermen and the companies have been as much as 191/2 cents a pound apart on new prices for salmon. In adnew prices for salmon. In addition, said Stevens, there is "very strong feeling" among fishermen that the companies should pay for workmen's compensation coverage, half the cost of the Canada Pension Plan and half the cost of

Stevens said effects of the strike on fresh fish should be noticed by the public in a week at the most and in a few days in some places.

Scott has spent two weeks travelling throughout the crowded Japanese islands, investigating what he tails a national form of schizophrenia, a nation trying to come to terms with both the blight and the rewards of an industrial boom without parallel in the world.

In his series of reports he examines Canada's im-proving trade relations with the Japanese, brought about by their need to present a new image in their trading role, the part played by a trades union movement that stresses company loyalty, the uncertain existence of Tokyo, the capital city, and the future of a country in which affluence and anxiety go hand-in-hand.

$ Devaluation Rumors Flying

Times News Services

LONDON - The U.S. dollar already at an alltime low, plunged even farther today on money markets around the world in the face of rumors that the U.S. would devalue the dollar for the third time in 14 months this weekend.

The London Evening Standard said a major development to deal with the monetary crisis could be imminent and may involve linking European Common Market currencies to gold instead of the dolones. cies to gold instead of the dol-

It said the situation had reached crisis dimensions and that "market men were talking of a crunch being imminent — possibly this weekend."

The value of the dollar lunged so low in Frankfurt that several major West German banks halted trading in dollars one hour ahead of schedule. A dollar was worth somewhere between 2.24 and 2.26 German marks at 4 p.m.

The value of the dollar dropped three per cent within 24 hours in Switzerland and bank described the situation in foreign exchange as "com-pletely out of control."

There were rumors that the franc would be revalued - or possibly devalued against the dollar to prevent a flood of low-priced American goods.

Karl Otto Pooehl, West German state secretary for mone-tary affairs, said the U.S. currency had become "vastly un-dervalued" and further de-cline could lead to collapse of the world's monetary system.

Poehl told an international meeting of business leaders in Frankfurt: "The devaluation of the dollar and the revaluation of the mark have gone too far" in a trend he de-scribed as "worrisome and dangerous."

The dollar, he said, has de-clined to a level that "nobody dared to imagine some months ago."

Poehl said he was convinced confidence in the dol-lar eventually would be res-tored — but it might take a-year or two for the reduced value of U.S. money to cor-rect the U.S. trade deficit.

On the world market, the British pound was the only currency to weaken against the dollar.

Dealers said the volume of trade was extremely thin with almost no one willing to buy dollars. This forced the dealers to mark the value of the U.S. money lower and the U.S. money lower and lower in the hope of tempting someone to buy.

John Palmer, business editor of The Guardian, wrote: The rapidly developing orld monetary crisis now threatens the breakup of the present international mone-

The Financial Times said the dollar crisis resulted from the continuing ramification of the Watergate affair and the wide-spread feeling arising from it that President Nixon lacks the authority either to regulate the U.S. economy or to take a positive initiative in the reform of the inmonetary and trading systems. The dollar bought less than four French francs in Paris today for the first time in 16 years. It reached an all-time low against the Japanese yen and U.S. tourists in Hong Kong got less than five Hong Kong dollars for $1 today for the first time in history.

It also fell to new lows in Frankfurt and Zurich and there were reports that soon it might buy only two West German marks and it would buy four less than a year ago.

RECORD JUMP IN U.S. PRICES

WASHINGTON (AP) Pushed upward by a record increase in the cost of farm products, wholesale prices rose in the United States last month at the sharpest rate since January, 1951, the government said today.

The bureau of labor statistics said the wholesale price index advanced by 2.4 per cent in June, just below the 2.5 per cent record in Jan-uary, 1951, during the Korean War inflationary boom. With adjustment for seasonal price changes, the rise was almost as bad, 2.3 per cent.

The seasonally adjusted increase matched the March advance in wholesale prices, which also was the highest since January, 1951.

Meanwhile, the bureau re-ported that the U.S. unemployment rate dropped to 4.8 per cent in June, marking the first time since June, 1970, that the rate has been below five per cent.

Prices of farm products in creased seven per cent in June, the biggest one-month jump since the government began keeping such records in 1947.

For consumer foods - basically what supermarkets pay to get their commodities -prices rose 2.2 per cent. Adjusted for seasonal influences, the advance was 1.7 per cent. Both rates were the highest

Gov't Eying Poultry Deal

The NDP government is looking at joint ownership of a poultry processing plant in Surrey.

Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said Thursday the government is giving "very favorable consideration" to a request from a poultry cooperative group for govern-ment funds to assist in the acquisition of Panco Poultry Ltd. of Surrey, the major poultry-processing company in the B.C. industry. Negotiations for acquisition of the company by the Pacific Poultry Co-operative are going on now. Stupich said the co-operative has approached the government for assis-

Federal Grain Ltd. of Winnipeg. Vancouver lawyer William Wright describes the negotiations as being in the "progressing" stage but that details cannot be made public

The Pacific Poultry Cooperative is made up of 122 broiler and turkey growers, mostly in the Fraser Valley. Co-operative vice-president

Bruce McAninch said today the co-op will attempt to get a loan from the still-inoperative B.C. Development Corporation to add to capital which will be raised from the cooperative members. He said the members themselves should be able to get up at least $250,000 towards the Panco purchase.

But McAninch said the final purchase price for the com-pany is still subject to negotiation and that speculation on any final deal at this point is premature.

He added that negotiations have been going "off and on" for the last six months between Panco and the coco-operative would likely need outside financial help in order to swing a Panco deal and added that the government would be "quite favorably in-clined to give support to this particular deal.'

The government, since it took office last September, has supported the idea of cooperatives going into business in agricultural production.

Other sources have indicated that a figure of 49 per cent government interest in the Panco acquisition has been mentioned in the negotiations, with the remaining 51 per cent interest held by the cooperative.

One reported purchase price for Panco has been $4.1 million.

Seattle Power Cuts Looming

SEATTLE (AP) - Seattle City Light may ration power this winter because of low reservoir levels and delays in planned power plants in the Pacific Northwest.

Asst. Supt. Julian Whaley says the move would hit residences hardest.

"We are looking primarily at residential users in rationing," he explained.

City Light serves about 250,000 customers in Greater Seattle area.

'Power simply would be cut off to various sections of the city on a rotating basis, for maybe two or more hours a Whaley said industry and business would have to conserve energy too, but that critical needs, such as hospitals, certain industrial and utility facilities and others would be supplied with power.
